Senior History

FOUR very short years ago we entered Fairfax Hall with the intention of improving ourselves, both socially and intellectually. As Freshmen, we took no part whatsoever in the important social functions of the year, but in our Saturday night parties we did show what talent we had.

It was in May of this year that the big event took place. A junior-senior reception—to which boys were invited—was substituted for the usual junior-senior banquet. As freshmen, we could take no part in this thrilling party, but we could anticipate a repetition of the event when we became juniors and seniors.

Our Sophomore year was a successful, as well as an eventful one. It was successful in that we made our grades and passed from the status of “wise fools” to the lofty, dignified position of juniors! It was eventful because of the many extra-curricular activities which we were privileged to enjoy. We went on many interesting and instructive trips; we heard many worthwhile recitals; and we enjoyed some splendid plays.

We worked hard in athletics this year in an attempt to be privileged to have “Sophomore Class” engraved on our athletic shield, but we had to leave this honor to the junior class.

Many new girls joined our class during our junior year. They came just in time to help us give the first dance of our very own. This was not our last dance, however; we had many more during the year. The junior-senior dance in May was a memorable occasion. We believe that we, as hostesses, derived just as much pleasure in decorating the gymnasium and preparing for our party as our guests, the seniors and their friends, had in dancing, and enjoying the fun we had planned for them.

In the spring of this year we had a very beautiful and delectable steak dinner to which we were allowed to invite our "boy friends."

Our junior year is outstanding, too, because it was then for the first time that we were allowed to have "dates" in the evening—and to attend a dance at Fishburne.

At last we have attained our goal—we are now dignified seniors, who are looking forward to graduation. This year, 1933-34, has been full of delightful events which will cause us to look back with sheer pleasure on our senior year at Fairfax Hall. Our May breakfast was one such occasion.

The Junior College graduates have worked with us and helped us this year to make a success of our social as well as our scholastic affairs. We have marched—ten strong—toward graduation from our Alma Mater. Mary Elizabeth Barber, Florence Barnes, Carolyn Brouse, Helen Branaman Margaret Braun, Marjorie Crandall, Judy Davey, Louretta DeKyzer, Justine Lohr, Martha Kline, and Elane Romeike are the members of the 1934 senior class who are leaving Fairfax Hall for the last time. As we go, we are taking with us the cherished ideals which have been held up before us and toward which we have worked. We entered Fairfax Hall through her four gateways: the gateways of work, play, friendship, and worship. We have followed the paths which led from these gateways and have found satisfatcion in the knowledge that we have accomplished our purpose of improving ourselves both socially and itellectually.

LOURETTA DEKYZER,
Historian.

Senior Class Will

ON THIS, the nineteenth day of May, Anno Dommini, one thousand, nine hundred and thirty-four, we, the Senior Class of Fairfax Hall, being of sound mind and body (for the benefit of those who may doubt it) do bequeath our under-estimated qualities, numerous virtues, renowned accomplishments, and certain personal chattels to designated parties: To wit:

ARTICLE I

SECTION I—To Fairfax Hall, our beloved Alma Mater, we leave the poignant recollection of our ever smiling faces and scholastic enthusiasm.

SECTION II—To Miss Vaughan, our Dean and Sponsor, we leave our deepest appreciation of her patience and understanding.

SECTION III—To the faculty and administration we leave a smile and a warm hand clasp in return for their stable guidance through our various difficulties.

ARTICLE II

(PERSONAL BEQUEATHS)

SECTION I—I, Helen Branaman, leave my naturally Wavy hair to Betty Emery.

SECTION II—I, Margaret Adelaide Rosalie Christine Braun, leave my naturally and permanently raised eyebrows to Betty Pattan, to save her the trouble.

SECTION III—I, Marjory Crandall, leave my red-headed cadet to Frances McKeever, for harmony's sake.

SECTION IV—I, Irma Judith Davey, leave my composure to Alma Earle Adams.

SECTION V—I, Louretta DeKyzer, leave my secretarial ability to Marjorie Picker, in due consideration of Miss Maxwell.

SECTION VI—I, Martha Lisbeth Kline, leave my will power at dieting to Kitty Gordon. May she ever be sylph-like.

SECTION VII—I, Justine Lohr, leave my waist line to Betty Cooper.

SECTION VIII—I, Elaine Romeike, leave my keen sense of humor to Virginia Ellen Todd.

ARTICLE III

SECTION I—I, Florence Katherine Barnes, leave my rapid power of speech to Lillian Price, in hopes that she may strike a happy medium.

SECTION II—I, Carolyn Harper Brouse, leave my ability to thoroughly enjoy a good onion to Mary Kaye Phelps.

SECTION III—I, Mary Elizabeth Barber, leave my Waynesboro crockery in the gentle hands of Marjorie White.

CODICIL:—In SECTION III of Article II, the red-headed cadet is left to Frances McKeever on the condition that she leave his brass buttons and his sash intact.

MARTHA LISBETH KLINE, Clerk.

Senior Class Prophecy

WHAT! Morning already? Thank goodness I can write my column for the paper in bed, and 'phone it in, because I certainly can't get up after last night. I wouldn't have missed last evening for all the money in the world, though. All these old Fairfax girls; yet, not so old at that. It's been only ten years since we left Fairfax, but what changes! Oh, here comes my breakfast! "Yes, put it here—and the newspaper. Thank You."

Well, I wonder what the news is going to serve me, with my breakfast, this morning? What's this? "Marjorie Crandall has returned from Reno for the fifth time. She says that she cannot seem to find the perfect read-head, but time will tell!" How delicious! If that isn't just like her! I think I'll call her now that she's back in town.

"Operator, I want George 330. Hello, may I speak to Miss Crandall, please? Marge, this is Peggy Braun,—uh, uh, yes, I read about it. Thought I'd give you a buzz and tell you I saw some old school chums last night. You saw whom? Justine Lohr? How is she? Last time I heard from her, she was a companion to Mrs. John D. Gotrocksallover. She is with her still? Good. Now, let me tell you about all the Fairfax girls I saw and heard of last night. First of all, I went to a dinner given by Mary Elizabeth Barber. It was in honor of Elane Romeike. She's poet laureate of America, you know. Oh, yes, she told me confidentially that she had planned to go to England and become their poet laureate, but she persuaded Congress to pass a bill because, as she said, they would be losing a bargain if they didn't. Mary Elizabeth Barber told me that she still has quite an interest in crockery. She also said that Carolyn Brouse is secretary to Andrew Mellon, and such a competent person, my dear. After dinner Judy Davey's husband, Crit, called for me, and we went to see Judy in the great tragedy, "Too Many Bills in Her Life."

What a performance! it is magnificent; you must go to see it. We went back stage to wait for Judy, and while we were waiting who should come tearing in but Flo Barnes! What? No, she hasn't changed a speck. She wanted Judy to sign a contract to play in her theater, "The Over-groundhedge." I think the play is to be "Romeo and Juliet."

Isn't that interesting about Helen Branaman? You haven't heard? Why, Marjorie, didn't you get the newspapers in Reno? Well, she has made some great psychological experiment. You know, I s'pose, that she is teacher of child psychology at Fishburne?

In the past day I have had my own little Fairfax reunion becau—oh, no I haven't forgotten those two. You interrupted me just as I was about to tell you. I received a letter from Mardie yesterday. Yes, her last name is still Kline but she tells me that it won't be for long because she has a "Hobby" now. She's in Vienna, where she is demonstrating her ability to put people to sleep by singing to them, and then she performs her (surgical) operations. The great surgeons hail this as a magnificent accomplishment. She wrote that she saw Louretta DeKyzer and her husband in Paris. You remember Jimmy, don't you?

But I must dash, dear, because I simply have to write my section for today, but before I say "au'voir" I must tell you that I am going to announce the engagements of Elane to General Jonathan Seeless Rearleyba and Chi Brouse to Laird Dehman. This should interest you.

Don't forget to read my column, "ol'thing," it's on page five and is called "Too Much Ado About Practically Nothing." May your next marital adventure be successful—so—'bye, Marge."

—MARGARET BRAUN,

Prophet.

The Young Women's Christian Association played this year, as always, an important part in the welfare of the school.

In October the new girls were received into the folds of the organization by an impressive candle lighting service.

Then in the fall we were pleased to have with us visiting ministers from Waynesboro for our chapel services.

Before Christmas, Harold Loring, a foremost authority on the American Indian and his music, accompanied by William Crazy Bull gave us a most enjoyable program.

As the Christmas season drew near, the Y. W. started its charitable work. The girls played Santa Claus to many of the unfortunate children of Waynesboro. A very effective white Christmas service was held in the chapel on the last Sunday before the holidays. This was followed by a play, "The First Gift," which was presented by the Fairfax Players in conjunction with the Fairfax Choir.

The party for the new girls was a huge success, as were the two dances given in November and February.

Our last program this year will be the lovely candle lighting service which is always a fitting close to the school year.

The Fairfax Players have had a most successful year under the guidance and leadership of Miss Smith, an ever faithful helper.

An excellent play entitled "Children of the Moon" was given early in December. A short play entitled "The First Gift" was given at Christmas.

This year the dramatic department has had charge of the Thursday morning Chapel programs, which have consisted of interesting readings and instructive talks.

In February the Fairfax Players sponsored the Kingsland Marionettes who gave us an unusual treat.

A group of three one-act plays was given in April. The program consisted of a comedy, a fantasy, and a Russian tragedy.

To complete the year, the play "Robin Hood" will be given at commencement. This, given out of doors, promises to be quite a spectacle.

The baby organization of Fairfax Hall is called the Scribblers Club. The charter members of this club are the members of the 1934 Faxette staff. Try-outs were held and new members were accepted according to the merits of the manuscripts they submitted. After the new members had been accepted, the club was definitely organized, and officers were elected. The club has furnished much of the literary material for this book, and has sponsored several very interesting chapel programs.

On Tuesday and Friday afternoons Fairfax Hall is indeed "a nest of singing birds." It is at these times that the chorus—that body of songsters so splendidly trained by Mrs. Day—lift up their voices in melody. It is then that the chorus rehearses the songs which are sung later in chapel, or at vesper services on Sunday evenings.

Throughout the year there have been recitals—at home and abroad. The vocal and piano students claimed a large and appreciative audience at their Christmas recital.

At Mary Baldwin College in Staunton, the English Singers gave a delightful program of motets and madrigals, which was enjoyed by a large number of Fairfax girls.

In February, we heard Myra Hess in recital at Cabell Hall in University.

We are grateful to both Mrs. Day and Miss Noer for their efforts in helping us to develop our various musical talents.

The 1934 Athletic Association has upheld the traditions and ideals of former successful Athletic Associations at Fairfax Hall. Miss Forsell has found in the 1934 Association a definite aid in making a varied and interesting athletic program.

The association's annual social event—the Hallowe'en party—was very spooky and most entertaining.

The A. A. banquet this year was adequate as the proper occasion on which to award athletic letters, badges, and trophies to the girls, who by virtue of their athletic abilities, merited them. The banquet also served as a fitting close to a successful year in athletics.

SEA PICTURES

One day I went wandering down to the sea,
I was tired of cities and longed to be free
From the hustle and bustle of traffic and stores,
And the yelling of news-boys and slamming of doors.

I wandered around on the long sandy strand,
Gathering up pebbles that lay in the sand,
They all were so shiny they sparkled like jade,
And I thought they would well please a little mermaid.

I was watching a gull flying high o'er the sea,
As I watched him I wondered if he could see me,
When suddenly down he swooped into the brine,
And rose proudly bearing a wee fish so fine.

A beautiful sloop now came sailing toward shore
With the waves dashing high from her prow more and more,
She was off on a port tack with all her sails set,
A more beautiful site I have never seen yet.

I ne'er am so happy as when I am there
Watching wind and waves sending foam high in the air,
I could sit on the rocks and dream day after day
And never grow tired of gulls or salt spray.

—MARIAN CHAPPELL.

A WINTER NIGHT

A white flakey blanket
Of soft and down-like snow,
A veil of peaceful silence,
And stars and moon hung low.

Silhouettes of fir trees,
With icicles gleaming bright,
All woven in together
Create a winter night.

WITH DISILLUSION'S EYES

CHARLES LAMBERT, the idol of women, was without inspiration. The sophisticated ladies of the theatrical circle who thought him "the perfect man" were no longer a tie great enough to keep him happy. What he needed was a sweet, lovely soul that would mate with his. So Charles told his chauffer, Patrick, to drive him slowly through the center of the city. As they cruised along, the "Matinee Idol" peered fruitlessly for his future affinity.

The car slowed and then stopped for a red light. Charles, glancing from the automobile, saw in the window of a cafeteria, the woman whom he knew could hold his heart forever. This gorgeous creature was nonchalantly flipping pancakes in a show window of the cafeteria. She was dressed in a pale green, frilly outfit, and her reddish gold hair curled from under the little green cap she wore. Her eyes reflected the verdancy of her native land, which was without a doubt, Ireland. No one could have such a sparkling smile, and not be a true "Mavourneen." With a stifled ejaculation, Charles leaned forward and tapped on the window, telling Patrick to park by the cafeteria. For an hour Lambert feasted his eyes on the charming "pancake maker," when suddenly she glanced up, started and then smiled radiantly! At him, yes, he was sure. Five minutes later she left her place, and a less Irish and naturally less beautiful demonstrator, took her place. Charles told Patrick to drive home; but following this, every afternoon after the matinee, the two men—chauffer and actor—went through the same ceremony, and every afternoon the girl looked up and smiled radiantly as if giving a message.

One morning, Charles awakened with the knowledge that today he was going to meet the young lady of his dreams. He would not let Patrick drive him home; no, he must keep it secret for a while. He dressed carefully. As they started for the theater, Patrick turned his head and said, "Soir, oi've important bus'ness today; could ye be lettin' me have the afternoon free?"

Charles replied with enthusiasm that it would be quite all right.

Patrick went on, "Ye see, sor, I'm gettin' married this noon to the loveliest Irish girl this side o' the ocean."

Charles smiled, thinking that there was one more girl just a bit lovelier, when Patrick continued, "Her name is Kathleen an' she's that demonstrator in that cafeteria which we always park beside."

With a start, Charles looked up, and the light that was in his eye went out, as it had so often before. He removed the flower from his buttonhole and murmured, "That's quite all right, I'll drive home alone."

—MARGARET BRAUN.

WHO'S IMPORTANT

IT HAPPENED! But it was inevitable. It happened about this time every year. They had been too busy to do it before, but now that commencement was at hand, they could refrain no longer.

"Well, why are you waving your arms about? Evidently, Mr. Bill Horloge, you think that you control everything in this school. Why don't you stop "tickulating" and go back to sleep? Leave it to me, I'll take care of things."

"Is that so? You won't unless my hands say so, and then you have to be punched in the nose before you do anything; I wouldn't be so lazy!"

"Now listen here! Grandpa, let me tell you a few things! In the first place, I don't have to be wound up all the time, and I don't get off balance, either. Just because you are related to the Gruens, the Bulovas, and the Hamiltons, and because your great grandfather came over on the Mayflower, you think you know everything. Please don't forget, Mister, that you are a plain Ingersoll, and that your ancestors can't help you do your duty here. I tell that girls when to go to work, when to go to play, when to go to meals, and when to go to bed."

"Umph, I do that and more, for I tell the teachers when it's time for their duty and when it's time to punch you in the nose again to remind you to yell at the girls. What's more, I can see what's going on around here. I can see the girls in their pretty party dresses, I can see them in their p'jays, and I can see them in the infirmary taking pink pills or having their temperature tested."

"Ha ha! I do you four better! For who but I can tell the girls when they may dance and then watch them whirl to the tune of some orchestra? Who but I can see over at the gym and watch them play games and do exercises? Who but I can hear the deep dark secrets told at roll call? And who but I can hear the sweet melodies which come from the practice rooms?"

"Oh, but it is I who tells you when to"

Mr. Bell could stand it no longer. He lost his temper completely by yelling with all his might. Trembling he waited, but Mr. Horloge made no retort. He felt ashamed for arguing on such a morning as this. Besides, hadn't he and Bill worked together all these years?

"Bill, ole pal, please forgive me. The graduating evercises are about to start, and if you agree as to the time we'll say good-bye to all the girls and wish them a happy summer."

"Agreed!" exclaimed Bill, and a long sweet chime was heard throughout the building.

—BETTY EMERY.

MY NOMINATION FOR THE HALL OF OBLIVION

BUT WHY do some people think that a truth party adds to the enjoyment of an evening? As soon as one is announced out come all the sarcastic to join in the fun, paying back all past slights, and scarcely hearing their own faults when they are mentioned.

Perhaps the last time the girl in the red pajamas had a box of candy, the blond critic, sitting on the radiator, didn't get a piece. At once the blonde takes great pleasure in telling her pajamed friend that she is stingy and rude. The tiny redhead, on the pile of pillows in the corner, then remembers that the girl from Chicago made the basketball team in preference to her and therefore informs the girl from the Windy City that she is conceited and plays up to the teachers. Later the brunette on top of the closet takes advantage of the opportunity to tell the pretty new girls who took Johnny (from a nearby military school) away from her; that she, the new girl, is a gold digger and has a horribly stale line.

By this time everyone has either got revenge or her feelings hurt and the party disbands. Those who have got revenge go gaily off to dance, while the others take the suggestions so deeply to heart that they are well on the way to acquiring an inferiority complex.

I imagine the person who invented truth parties is a cold, heartless creature always on the lookout for new faults in his acquaintances; and I think he should be caught and punished by having his faults shouted at him three times a day with new ones added once a week.

But now I must go. There is a truth party down the hall and as long as they exist I might as well attend them. Besides there is a girl there who just received a lot of food and if she does not offer me some I can tell her she is stingy.

Alma Mater

I

Pledge we now our loyal friendship,
Pledge it one and all,
To the school we love so dearly;
Hail to Fairfax Hall!

Chorus

Loudly praise our Alma Mater,
Best school in the land;
Through the years we're friends forever,
Loyally we stand!

II

Memories will always linger,
Round our school so dear;
May the friends formed at Fairfax,
Love throughout the years.

Mardie would eat, and not just munch?
Sallie should forget to eat her lunch?
Gainsey should lose her sense of humor?
At Fairfax, there should not be a rumor?
Each of us could have a creamy skin?
And return home minus a double chin?
Just supposin'.

BONERS HEARD AT FAIRFAX

Isn't it interesting to know that we have "four fathers"? Mardie gave us this startling news in one of her lucid papers.

Heard during book-keeping class—the topic being interest-bearing and non-interest-bearing notes.

Miss Maxwell: "Carolyn, please make your monthly statement."

Chi: "I have on hand $50 in cash and many uninteresting notes!"

Mrs. Hoskins: "Why may we call Emily Dickinson a modern writer?"

Gainsey: "Well in the first place, Emily Dickinson didn't publish her poems until after she died!!!"

Found on "Jessel's" French examination. "Corneille's purpose for writing 'Le Cid' was to give a representation of life in its wild relations."

We Congratulate . . .

The Editor and Staff of FAIR FACTS on the results of their efforts in presenting to you this Year Book. Did you realize as you leafed through its pages the work, both mental and physical, spent in its making? Did you pause, if only for a moment, to try to solve the question, how was this book made? Did you know that it was all compiled first in the minds of the staff, a small piece at a time until it was completed? Did you know that we took these mental pieces of creative imagination and gave them to you in concrete form?

We trust our years of training in the Annual field has enabled us to be of some assistance to the staff and that we have given you a book of which you will be proud to claim as a true representative of your school. If this be true, then our work has been well done.
